

...Paul is about to collapse after carrying his mother-in-law up six flights of stairs. Her comment on the location of the newlyweds' apartment, "I think we've died and gone to heaven."

...Sue Warren (Corie Bratter) tells Al Bloom (Victor Velasco) following their trip to Staten Island, "My tongue keeps rolling up." He says, "That's a good sign. That means the food was seasoned perfectly."

Local actors schedule a three-act comedy

The Gilroy Community theatre group will present its second production of the season, "Barefoot in the Park," on Jan. 23, 24, 30, and 31 at 8 p.m. in the Gavilan College Theater, Gilroy.

The three-act comedy by Neil Simon is under the direction of Ross "Spike" Taylor with an assist from Mary Ann Brueggman.

"Barefoot in the Park" is the story of young newlyweds learning to 'live' with each others good and bad points in their not too perfect first apartment. The adjustments and maturing process present some hilarious situations in addition to the way-out antics of their weird neighbors.

Portraying the newlyweds will be Bob Stanley as Paul Bratter, and his bride Corie Bratter is played by Sue Warren.

Other members of the cast are Frances Bloom as Mrs. Banks, Corie's mother, Al Bloom as Victor Velasco, Ron Williams as the telephone man, and the delivery man will be portrayed by Jim Ledden.

The setting for "Barefoot in the Park" has been designed by Doris Setchel, and set construction is by Nestor Avina, Joe Delgado, and Ed Miller. Stage manager is Mary Ann Brueggman and her assistant is Joe Delgado. House manager is Donna Avina.

Reserved seat tickets may be obtained from cast members, Gilroy Stationers, by calling Mrs. Bloom at 842-5925, or the Gilroy Parks and Recreation Department office at 842-6583.

Patrons and sponsors are reminded to contact the recreation department office for their tickets for this production.

BAREFOOT IN THE PARK

— South County residents still have a chance to see the production of Barefoot in the Park presented by the Gilroy Community Theatre and the Parks and Recreation Department. Closing performances will be tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Gavilan College Theatre. Above is a scene from the play in which Paul, played by Robert Stanley, a newlywed, collapses after carrying his mother-in-law, played by Frances Bloom, up five flights of steps to their small apartment. Standing are Sue Warren, who plays Corie Bratter, and Al Bloom, known in the play as the Bluebeard of Tenth Avenue.
