

Curtain Up Review: LimeLight's "Inspecting Carol" — A pre-Christmas jaunt

Curtain Up Review: LimeLight's "Inspecting Carol" — A pre-Christmas jaunt

<https://morganhilllife.com/2017/11/27/curtain-up-review-limelights-inspecting-carol-a-pre-christmas-jaunt/>

Published on MorganHillLife.com

LimeLight Actors Theater bounced into the Christmas Season with a joyous leap with Kevin Heath's production of "Inspecting Carol", (LimeLight's final 2017 show. Combining with their annual Michael J. Fox Parkinson's Fundraiser.

"Inspector Carol" has many firsts with the largest cast ever used in a LimeLight production, mostly made up with the tried and true former cast members from the past season and for first time using a child actor.

Making up this wild cast are Doug Doughty, Joanne Englehardt, Roselind Farotte, Jason Harris, Joey King, Dave Leon, Dana Morgan, Bruce Pember, Rachel Perry, Michael Perry, John Verela and Christine Wanish

The play is the story of a second rated soapbox playhouse somewhere in the Midwest trying to get a third rate hammy bunch of actors getting a production of A Christmas Carol off the ground ready for an opening in a few days. Everything goes amiss, people involved are mistaken and replaced for other characters finances are questionable and chaos abounds with a lot of laughs and hysteria.

The experienced cast pulls off the satire with great aptitude and gives everyone a relaxing fun time with lots of laughs.

February 9th 2018 opens LimeLight's 8th top rated season with the touching comedy "The Savannah Sipping Society".