MESSAGE FROM THE SVCT PRESIDENT

Welcome to South Valley Civic Theatre's production of Mean Girls by our talented teen cast! Reminiscing about high school can be both wonderful and give us nightmares. On its surface, Mean Girls is bright and funny but just below that surface it will take you on a journey through the emotions of our high school days.

The stage musical, written by Tina Fey with music by Jeff Richmond and Nell Benjamin was based on the 2004 box office hit movie. The movie, in turn, was based on a self-help book, "Queen Bees and Wannabes" by Rosalind Wiseman which advised parents of teens on how to deal with the complex social dynamics of adolescent girls, including cliques, gossip, and peer pressure. Those lessons of that original 2002 source material are just as relevant today as they were over 20 years ago.

With most of our performers in high school, they bring a special, personal perspective to their performances as they relate to the lessons about friendship, identity, and social interaction. Perhaps, as we experience Mean Girls, we can all learn important lessons about staying true to oneself and the importance of kindness in our lives, whether in high school or all the years of our lives. The musical reminds us that real strength lies in lifting others up rather than tearing them down.

South Valley Civic Theatre always endeavors to bring entertaining and meaningful productions to our community. I hope you agree that this production has achieved those goals.
